

About the author David M. Kaplan is an Associate Professor in the Department of Economics at the University of Missouri. He has enjoyed teaching econometrics for many years, from the undergraduate level through advanced PhD level. His research also focuses on econometrics, providing new methodology to help us learn more from our data, with publications in journals like Econometric Theory, Econometrics Journal, and Journal of Econometrics.

About the text This textbook was developed for teaching Advanced Topics in Econometrics (PhD elective) at the University of Missouri. The text and its source files are available on the author's website.

Distributional and Nonparametric Econometrics

David M. Kaplan

First Edition